The use of social media in career-related activities has increased dramatically in recent years. These relatively-new outlets can benefit you in several areas, including keeping you informed of trends and news, serving as a place to source jobs and internships, and allowing you to expand your network.

There is a wide array of social media sites that you can utilize, and the popularity of each will ebb and flow as technology and trends dictate. We recommend you consider the following:

- LinkedIn.com [1]? This professional networking site provides you the opportunity to establish a professional online identity, participate in conversations on relevant topics, and make connections with professionals in your industry or career path. Key tip: To get the most out of LinkedIn seek out and participate in ?linkedin groups? of interest.

- Twitter.com [2]? This microblogging site may be most widely known for its use by media outlets and celebrities, but can also be a great way for you to interact with people of similar professional interests from across the globe. Additionally, companies are increasingly using Twitter to promote jobs and internships. Key tip: Use ?hashtag? searches (e.g. #jobs or #internships and) ?follow? companies of interest to find opportunities.

- Facebook.com [3]? This social networking site likely needs no introduction or instruction on usage. But, be sure that your activities on Facebook won?t give prospective employers ?red flags? about you as a candidate. Check your photos, videos and comments for professionalism. Key tip: Utilize Facebook?s privacy settings to disallow public viewing of tagged photos, wall posts and other aspects of your profile (or make your profile entirely unsearchable).

There are a variety of other tools and sites that you can use to develop your personal brand and incorporate into your job search strategy, including blogging (Wordpress.com [4], Blogger.com [5]) and participating in sharing networks (Slideshare.com [6]). But, like most career-related activities, you should initiate these as part of a larger strategy that emphasizes your personal skills and values. UCS counselors can help you explore opportunities and decide what avenues are best for your goals.
