  Historically, the Diversity Career Fair sought to help students connect with employers seeking to create and sustain diverse workforce environments primarily through ethnic and racial minority recruitment. However, as the definition of diversity has broadened, UNC-Chapel Hill has expanded its definition to include a variety of underrepresented and underserved student populations including women, people of diverse sexual orientations, gender identities, gender expressions, disability statuses and veterans. UCS partners with campus leaders and student organizations that serve or represent students who can contribute to your organization's success.
